OBJECTIVE & PURPOSE OF THE STUDY

The Objective of the Study

A disparity study is an objective research tool used to determine if disparities in a governmental agency's procurement activities exist within certain race, ethnic, and gender groups in the various Industry Categories. It further determines whether those disparities are statistically significant and likely caused by the race and gender status of firm owners.

Disparity studies also utilize the acquisition of anecdotal evidence while examining current policy procedures and practices, and a law review.

The findings of the Procurement Study result in recommendations by the Study team, and if accepted, are intended to be implemented as policy.

Purpose of the Study | The Legal Approach

Disparity Studies form the factual basis for remedial contracting programs

City of Richmond v. J.A. Croson Co.,

- 488 U.S. 469 (1989)

Adarand Constructors, Inc. v. Peña,

- 515 U.S. 200 (1995)
- Strict Scrutiny for race-based programs (Intermediate for gender-based programs)
- Must have a factual basis in evidence
- Methodology dictated by Case Law
- Must have a narrowly tailored remedy (to avoid over- or under-inclusion)
